AMERICAN

Empowered

Stepping away from protection,
Going into deep reflection.
Learning from my darkened past,
In order to make a meaningful cast.

Talking about politics is something I used to fear,
Now my confidence is drawing near.
I'm in a place where my hope is at its best,
Knowing my beliefs are put to the test.

Courage is rising, I'm starting to stray,
Toward my feelings, far from my parents' way.

Compromise is far from home,
But it's a path I must roam.
It's my duty to use my brain,
To break the polar chain.

Coming out of reflection,
Knowing I am not perfection.
Coming out of my normal range,
To give our home a positive change.

-Lucy Paschke, Daisy

Spoken Word Poem (Part 1)

“To Be Alive”

By Anonymous GS Citizen

“It” is a mess
The lives that we lead while we wait for a rest
Shatter the hopes and dreams
Of the insects
Roaming the ground beneath
And your feet
Wander hopelessly
As you’re struggling and trying desperately
To figure “it” out

But what is “it”?

“It” is the fear
That the gears
In your head
Are dead
And eventually Stop commencing
The persistence
In existence
Why must we dig
And dig
And give
And give Only to take
And take
And break
All that we create

“It” is constructive
With destructive Tendencies
That we forcefully make
And still question
The mention
Of mental vacancy
We are all booked out!

Whenever the Girls State song
starts playing:
